Joseph Barry is indeed justified in voicing his concern that there are no dissenters in America today like Jean-Paul Sartre or Boris Pasternak. Let him rest assured, however, that there are many Americans who feel outraged at the reports of C. I. A. activities in Florida, Guatemala, etc.

Should the Kennedy Administration decide to continue along the reckless course taken by the Eisenhower Administration with regard to Cuba, these people will certainly not sit by passively simply because to do so is considered "patriotic."
